Today I experienced the polar opposite ends of patient centred care from both of you.

One nurse cared, was compassionate and had my best interests at heart and one nurse was so preoccupied with the rules, procedures and protocols so much so that me the living breathing human being was lost in my disease and sheer weight of the NHS systems and processes.

Someone once said that "Care is a freely given gift of the heart" and this is r you...

Please reflect on my story, think about me and this letter when you are looking after your next patient approaching the end of their life.

Care is "a freely given gift of the heart" it really does make all the difference.
